

FRIDAY FROLICS

Friday 17th September 2021

Immediately after breakfast Faye and I headed off to Royal National Park to walk the Robertsons Loop. We were I search of a few species.

Calytrix tetragona

Boronia floribunda

That was target 1

And target 2: the Flying Duck Orchid, Caleana major

The first I have seen this year!

Xanthosa pilosa

Lomandra longifolia

Before lunch we continued on to Kurnell and Kamay-Botany Bay National Park. I was curious if the new whale-watching site was open. It is not. The road is still closed so we dropped into Yena Gap to take in the view.

I even looked to “the other side”, the area “beyond the Pale”!

It was time, also, to concentrate on “art”! A charcoal image above of the image below!

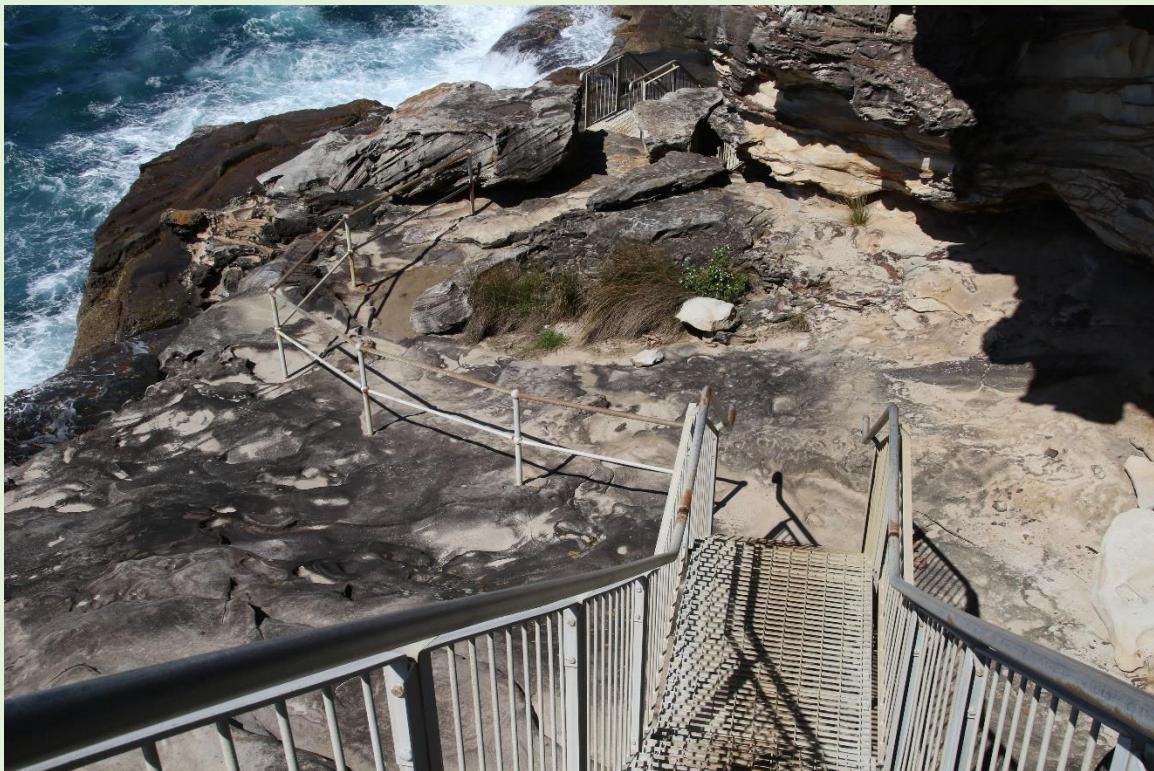

There was time to check out another site before lunch too. Gosh, we even removed a small shopping bag of Mother of Millions!

Melaleuca nodosa

After a short online meeting I headed out again to the Uloola Falls Fire Trail and that was when I discovered I had not swapped my lens from scenery to macro work. Oh well, let's try with what I brought!

Calochilus robertsonii

Calochilus paludosus

Glossodia minor

A Tachinid fly on Daviesia corymbosa (I think)

And the devils are out and about

Caladenia carnea

Caladenia catenata

Meanwhile two buds; so, expect a return visit this weekend!

Thelymitra carnea

Caleana major

Brian Everingham
